SPORTING NEWS.

JOE GANS HARD AT WORK.

Joe Gans is hard at work in preparation for his battle with Jimmy Britt on March 17. He is still the favorite in the betting and will go in a two or three to one choice. The knowing ones cannot figure how he can lose, although Britt has a strong following. His backers have confidence in and believe he can win. Time is a fortune teller, and will have to decide this case.

The balmy days make the fans think of the grassy plot. They are beginning to crowd out of their winter quarters and cast around for some one to discuss the present, past and future. Much speculation is being indulged in as to what steps, if any, will be taken to secure a plot and build a park for athletics. A Globe reporter called to see Mr. Preston Taylor, the manager of Greenwood Park, to ascertain whether or not he intended to build an athletic field out there by time the season opened, but he was out of the city and nothing could be learned.

Last Friday evening between the hours of 6 and 7 four infuriated women were "fighting like tigers" on Fifth avenue, South, between Broadway and the stables of Cornelius & Co., the undertakers. A Globe representative chanced to be passing during the heat of the battle, and noticing that the life of one combatant was in danger, as her antagonist was administering to her a fearful beating with a poker, rushed into the fray, snatched the poker from the hands of the irate female, and beat a hasty retreat down the street.
